Community rallies around fire victims

PATRICK BALES
Postmedia Network

The Bradford West Gwillimbury community has come together like it has few other times before as it helps nine people re-start their lives.

Nine people lived full-time in apartments at 27 John St. E., a century building that was gutted by fire last Monday. The tenants, ranging from single mothers with young children to an elderly couple who had lived there for approximately 40 years, all were unscathed during the blaze, but lost nearly everything they owned.

Six of the seven units in the building were rented out at the time of the fire.

By the next morning, a collection of local residents and town councillors sprang together to solicit cash and goods for the victims of the fire, organizing a donation drive that has taken over social media in the community.

"The response from the community has floored us. Absolutely floored us," said Irene Louro, one of the initial six community organizers of the drive to support those who lived at 27 John St. E. "We are so overwhelmed by the support and generosity of the community. It's been so heart touching."

Louro was initially joined by five other women - Karla

Baynes, Ellen Walker, Kim Millsop, Cheryl Leblond and Laura Martin - in a meeting with Ward 2 Councillor Gary Baynes and Bradford West Gwillimbury Mayor Rob Keffeler to put together a "plan of attack" to help the families affected by the fire.

The collective were not all old friends who regularly meet. While some did know each other, the desire to do something to help the families who lost their homes in the fire brought them together as a group.

"The night that the fire happened, we were online, we saw what was happening," Louro recalled. "Right away, I offered to help, Cheryl offered to help... I messaged her, Laura Martin messaged me and we put on this meeting the next morning (at Coffee Culture)."

There was no hesitation, Louro said, on the part of her or any of the other volunteers. They were all willing to get together and help these people who they thought were strangers - but in some cases were already acquaintances - get their lives back together.

The group sat down to plot out an initial response, which morphed into the three-stage donation plan that has been publicized at length, primarily through the 27 John Street East Fire - Donation Information Facebook group.

Beginning last Tuesday, emergency items, such as clothing, toiletries and cash began to be collected, through two trust funds at local banks and at the Bradford and District Memorial Community Centre (the Old Arena). Getting the space at the Old Arena, located centrally near the fire and in Baynes' ward, occurred at the last minute, and was thanks to acting director of leisure services Terry Forhan and his staff, the councillor said.

"We couldn't have done it without the team, our volunteers, the entire community," Louro said. "We're just flabbergasted at how the community has been so generous."

Not only have local residents been donating items and cash, but local businesses and service groups such as the Bradford Professional Firefighters Association. Also, a number of gift cards have been donated in bulk by members of the Bradford business community.

For the latest information about helping the families, visit the 27 John Street East Fire - Donation Information Facebook group.

Councillors discuss future of sewers in Bond Head

A planning map, supplied in the committee-of-the-whole package for Bradford West Gwillimbury council's April 7 meeting, shows the location of a proposed subdivision in Bond Head.

PATRICK BALES
Postmedia Network

A seemingly routine decision at Bradford West Gwillimbury committee-of-the-whole as to whether or not to grant an extension for a draft subdivision plan turned into a much larger discussion about the future of servicing in Bond Head.

Bond Head Property Two and Bond Head Property Three received approval from Bradford West Gwillimbury town council in 2012 for a draft plan, which included 344 detached dwellings, in a 54-hectare area straddling County Road 27, north of County Road 68.

Yet, under The Planning Act, draft plans expire after three years if their terms have not been met. The property owners came to council requesting a three year extension, good through June 2018.

Councillor Gary Baynes wondered if three years was going to be enough. "Are we going to end up extending it again?" he asked.

In his report, Alan Wiebe, senior planner for the town, said there had been no rationale given by the property owners for the extension request, but alluded to a possible reason.

"As part of the town's capital plan, it's my understanding that it is anticipated that service extensions would take place to the Bond Head settlement area," Wiebe told councillors. "That would assist the applicant in fulfilling a number of conditions for draft plan approval in terms of providing services to the residential development."

Of the 106 conditions of the draft plan approval, 17 relate to servicing requirements.

Councillor Peter Dykile Jr., one of the veterans of council, has seen discussions about the future of Bond Head time and time again throughout the past 20 years. He said it is time for the town to make the proper plans for servicing in Bond Head, partially for the new homes that will be built, but more so for the current residents.

"This has been a big worry for the existing residents: that one day there will be...sewers running through Bond Head," Dykile said. "At what point does our administration look at costing, or making available sewage for existing people? At some level, we need to look at the cost."

When properties are forced onto town services, there is a cost to the homeowners. Dykile is worried that that might do to those who have lived for years in the municipality's western hamlet.

"When you look at those beautiful big lots that are in Bond Head...I don't want to see a burden put on the existing residents," he said. "They've worked their whole lives to stay in a home and there's a big cost to book up to sewage. At some point we need to take the bull by the horns and deal with this."

Being prepared is prudent and necessary, Dykile stressed. Once construction begins on the development in Queenville, he said, Bond Head is next.

Town chief administrative officer Geoff McKnight acknowledged Bond Head residents have been concerned, saying the town will deal with them similarly to other servicing situations that have recently arisen, such as in Green Valley.

"This has been a question of the residents of Bond Head," McKnight said. "What would the timing of services be, what would be the cost and will it happen?" McKnight said.

The trunk infrastructure that the town is designing, including force mains, pumping stations and water transmission, is all being sized to accommodate the current residents in Bond Head, McKnight said.

"The next main question council will have to ask itself...is to determine what the local distribution and collection costs would be to provide the internal servicing within the existing neighbourhoods," he added. "At some point, I'd say within the next year, we'll come back in front of council to get your direction and marking on that design and costing exercise."

There was an expectation, McKnight said, that servicing would be complete by Bond Head by now, when the initial draft plan was approved, but a lack of financing suspended the infrastructure program. There was approximately a two year delay while that was being sorted out.

However, councillor Gary Lamb doesn't see this coming to a conclusion any time soon.

"What's a realistic figure for development? Is three years the right figure or does it have to wait until the next council?" Lamb asked. "Because, we understand the pipes are going to be sized, etc., etc., but the real deal is when does this really happen? Because they're going to come back in three years and I'm not certain if all going to be done." Baynes concluded the discussion with a changed mind than when he began it.

"We should bring it back to this council," he said. "No sense guessing five years...the more I think about it, three years is right."

Committee unanimously voted to recommend an extension to June 2018.

Point of View

We're all in this together

Overwhelmed. It's a word we've heard a lot lately and in the best way possible. People are overwhelmed by the kindness of strangers. People are overwhelmed by the support from their neighbours. People are overwhelmed by the strength of the Bradford West Gwillimbury community.

Last Monday nine people had their worlds turned upside down when a fire gutted the century old structure at 27 John St. E. Like so many large buildings of that time, what once held one or two families had been divided into seven separate units. Six of those were occupied leaving nine people who lived there full-time homeless.

What happened next has amazed us. In their time of need, these people have been lifted up by the other residents and businesses who make up Bradford West Gwillimbury. Thousands of dollars has been raised in cash and gift cards. Countless vital items have been donated, so that these people who lost virtually all of their worldly possessions can start anew and get back to normalcy as soon as possible.

It is unfortunate that it takes a tragedy to measure the strength of a collective such as a town's citizens. However, in a moment of need, dozens, if not hundreds, of people have stepped up to help their neighbours. Each volunteer, each donor, has their own reasons, all of them equally important. But at the base, so many of them are doing it because of the one thing they share with the victims: the town they call home.

As Bradford West Gwillimbury grows, it changes in unfathomable, unrecoverable ways. But for all the charms of small town life we lose as we expand, we cannot lose our sense of community.

We are no longer a town where everyone knows everyone else and each other's business. But we are still a town of residents who care for each other. We look out for each other on the way up. We take care of each other on the way down.

Allow us to commend the organizers who have devoted themselves 24/7 since last week to helping the nine victims of the fire for the job they've done. Every member of this community is proud of your commitment.

And as the community surrounding them has demonstrated in the past week, we're here to help any way we can.

Letters to the Editor

GOD DOESN'T WANT TO HEAR YOUR RINGTONE

I just wanted to say congratulations to all of those who attended Holy Martyrs of Japan for their first communion on April 12. It was very pleasant to see a Church filled with people.

I am however quite disappointed that very many people found their personal electronic devices more important than the mass proceedings. It was a very special day for many, this is understood. However, if the cell phones and personal electronic devices are more important than the mass, I ask them, please, wait outside and at least respect those that attend mass for what it is.

The Father had even asked for people to remain respectful of the mass. I guess most think that request, or simply carried on texting and talking with complete disregard.

I hope that this is not an example of the role model all of us as parents would like to set for our children.

Local cheese producer fined by MOE

PATRICK BALES
Postmedia Network

A whey spill is going to cost a local cheese producer a lot of cheddar.

The Ontario Ministry of the Environment (MOE) announced last Wednesday Silani Sweet Cheese Limited was fined at total of $80,000 for failing to notify the ministry of a spill of ricotta cheese whey and for a breach of its Amended Certificate of Approval, contrary to the Environmental Protection Act and Ontario Water Resources Act.

A news release from the MOE stated more than two years ago, in January 2013, ricotta cheese whey overflowed from a silo at the site, near Schomberg. The discharge lasted up to 10 minutes.

The MOE first caught wind of the spill from the Town of Bradford West Gwillimbury. The provincial body investigated at the site Jan. 22, 2013, the day after the spill occurred.

A search of the ministry's records revealed that the company failed to notify the ministry of the circumstances and of the action that was taken or intended to be taken with respect to the spill.

The ricotta cheese whey exited the site and travelled to an adjacent field owned by a neighbour, the release continued. Approximately 1,200 litres of whey flowed into the field towards a very small slow-flowing stream inhabited by minnows and invertebrates.

"A water expert from the ministry assessed the spill and found it had the potential to cause deoxygenation in the nearby stream and result in adverse impacts to the aquatic life in the stream," Kate Jordan, spokesperson for the MOE said.

Around the same time, the MOE discovered Silani was not operating under the conditions of its Amended Certificate of Approval. Silani had to operate its sewage works to ensure that the average concentration limit of Total Phosphorus in the effluent did not exceed 0.30mg/L in any month.

Silani's Annual Report

"We found out about the March 2012 exceedance a year later, in March 2013, when company submitted (its) 2012 annual report," Jordan said. "The company was aware of the exceedance in April 2012, but it was not reported to us until roughly a year later."

The limit of .30 mg/L is a limit set by the MOE to protect the environment in the receiving body after studying its limits to accept phosphorus. This is done with the area eco-system in mind, Jordan said.

"Any exceedance is something we take seriously... and poses the potential for harm," she added. "In this case, charges were deemed warranted, and (Silani) pleaded guilty."

On top of the $80,000 fine, Silani was hit with a $20,000 victim fine surcharge. It has 18 months to pay the fines.

Cleaning up the town

PATRICK BALES/POSTMEDIA NETWORK

While not all the items found during the community clean-up in Bradford Saturday were as exciting as a grenade (see page 13), the task of making the community look its best still needed to be done and dozens of people took time out of their weekends to pitch in. Siblings enjoy exchange experience

PATRICK BALES
Postmedia Network

For the first time this year, Emma Langford and her brother, Reuben, spent Christmas apart from their five other siblings and their mother and father. In fact, they didn't even see each other.

Emma, a Grade 10 student at Bradford District High School, and Reuben, a Grade 6 student in W1 Day's extended French program, were on separate international student exchanges in France, organized through En Famille International, an organization that puts together immersion exchanges for students between the ages of nine and 16 to France, Germany and Spain.

The Bond Head youths were both in France, completing six months of study in Europe, from Aug. 2014 to Feb. 2015. Not only was it the first time the two had been away from each other, but it was also their first time in a regular school.

"Before I went to France, I was home schooled, so it was my first school experience," Emma said. "I found it really neat. The hours are definitely a lot longer (in France). There (isn't) semesters; it's the same eight classes every day."

The social aspect of school appealed a great deal to Reuben.

"I really enjoyed the connection to my friends, my family and what I did there," he said, adding that he didn't find too many differences between the English and French schools: they both have different classes, and most importantly, they both have classes.

Learning the language was a big reason for Emma to take on the exchange. She knew the basics of French, but not much more beyond that.

"I found it easier than trying to learn it here because I was fully immersed there," Emma explained. "I wasn't supposed to speak English, so it was easier to learn French without having English in my head all the time."

Her brother knew even less than her.

"I didn't know anything going over, but I like to talk a lot, so having me wanting to talk made me want to learn the language faster," Reuben said.

Reuben stayed in the home of Victor Dubiez while in France. Victor's first time in Canada saw another bitterly cold winter, but he is enjoying his time here so far.

Victor, also in Grade 6, is becoming stronger in his English language skills as each week passes. So far, his highlight of Canada is maple syrup. He has also noticed a difference in the schools between the two countries.

"In France, (there are) no computers (in the classroom)," he said. "In Canada, computer, iPad (are available)." He's also had to learn how to make his own lunch, as there isn't a cafeteria at Sir William Osler, where he is attending, a marked difference from schools in France, where each institution has a cafe for students to purchase lunch.

Emma's exchange student, Philou, was in Canada from April to Aug. 2014. Heather Langford, Emma and Reuben's mother, said Philou was a welcome addition to the crowded Langford household.

"She was great. She was very crafty; she was everything that I'm not," Langford said with a laugh. "She loved crafts, so she did that a lot with our little children."

Victor has been fitting right in with the Langfords as well.

"Victor is really active with the boys and has a lot of fun with them," she said. "Because we have such a large family, it helps to keep them busy. There's lots of activity, lots of different personalities."

Langford is a veteran of multiple exchanges and so it seems natural that her children would take part in an exchange program as well. They both enjoyed their time overseas.

"It was amazing," Emma said. "The culture was really cool. It was rich and had a lot of history in it as well."

Any parents who interested in learning more about the En Famille program can visit enfamilie.com. If they wish to speak to Langford directly about her experience welcoming students into her home and sending her children off overseas, e-mail her at langfordclan@rogers.com.

Tanaka seeks support from York-Simcoe

PATRICK BAILES/POSTMEDIA NETWORK

While it still may be a few months before the writ drops in the federal election, one local candidate is on the ground looking to secure support. Shaun Tanaka, the Liberal candidate for York-Simcoe officially opened her campaign office in Queensville Saturday. A number of her supporters and other Liberal politicians joined her for a ribbon cutting ceremony, followed by some canvassing.

PAUL NOVOSAD/SPECIAL TO THE BRADFORD TIMES

York Regional Police officers dispose of a jar containing a grenade at the South Simcoe police station in Bradford Saturday.

Surprise among the trash collected at community clean-up

A community clean-up event in Bradford uncovered a surprise for at least one volunteer.

South Simcoe police say a grenade, with the pin still in it, was found around 10:30 a.m. on a walking trail near the BWG Leisure Centre during the clean-up event.

Staff Sgt. Steve Wilson said a civilian brought the grenade, wrapped up in tissue and contained in an empty peanut butter jar, to the South Simcoe Police station on Melbourne Drive in Bradford. The jar was left on the front seat of a pickup truck in the parking lot.

The area was cordoned off and members of the York Regional Police Emergency Response Unit and Explosive Disposal Unit were called in to dispose of the grenade.

The device was contained and then placed in a "hopper" and removed from the scene and was detonated by police in a gravel pit near Mount Albert.

Wilson said it appears the grenade wasn't live.

"In 90 per cent of these cases they have been deactivated," said Wilson, noting after the Second World War deactivated grenades were often kept as mementos. "We always have to treat it as if it's live."

Police are asking anyone with information to contact them at 905-775-3311.

Closing the book on storied career

The chief executive officer of the Bradford West Gwillimbury Public Library and Cultural Centre is ready to turn the page on her career.

The library board announced last week that CEO Liz Fenwick is resigning her position. Fenwick has announced her plans to retire from a role she's held since 1998.

Fenwick's resignation will take effect on July 31.

"Liz's vision and leadership has guided the staff and entire collection into its new home, the state-of-the-art environmentally-friendly building that services the town's growing population with more programs than ever before," said Milt Calder, chair of the library board. "We have big shoes to fill."

"It has been my pleasure to serve the community for 17 years in my role as CEO of this wonderful library and cultural centre," Fenwick said. "It has been very rewarding and stimulating. It has been a privilege to lead the staff and the volunteers who work so hard to make this library the accessible-to-all, imaginative place that it is."

Under Fenwick's tenure, the Bradford West Gwillimbury Public Library relocated from a 10,000 square foot building to a 40,000 square foot, Gold LEED certified building offering 966 children's programs in 2014 and numerous cultural activities, centred on music and the arts. The library houses a local history archive, hosts traditional author visits and lends hardcopy books for free to residents but also boasts automated self-checkouts, an expansive e-collection, free wifi and even tutorials to help those start up and use their e-readers. In 2014, there were 150,000 people through its gates.

Fenwick has been a member of the Ontario Library Association (OLA), Administrators of Medium-size Public Libraries of Ontario (AMPLIO), Federation of Ontario Public Libraries (FOPPL), and Human Resources Network of Ontario Libraries (HRNOL) and is the Past Chair of the Chief Librarian's Committee of the Simcoe County Cooperative Library.

The Bradford West Gwillimbury Public Library Board will begin a formal recruiting process to select Fenwick's replacement in the near future.

The Town of Bradford West Gwillimbury is pleased to announce the second annual Lifesaving Society "April Pools Day" event running April 25 from 1:15 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Bradford Lions Aquatic Centre. The Department of Lifesaving Services is excited this year to have the event sponsored by the Bradford Lions Club. The event aims to help families prepare for a safe summer by offering water safety tips and activities.

In Ontario, 76 people lost their lives due to drowning in 2014 in comparison to 103 drowning victims in 2013. This is good news and a significant drop, likely due to cooler summer weather. The drownings among boating incidents still remain the same. There were 27 fatalities in 2014, similar to 2013. The vast majority of drowning victims continue to be men. Last year, there was a slight increase in male drownings from 23 vs. 21 in 2013.

The emphasis for this year's event will be "Swimming is a Life Skill" - an important skill to learn in order to prevent drowning and in turn, promotes physical activity for all ages. The goal is for parents and children in the community to learn life-long water safety skills and to be better prepared for the summer months, when drowning occurs the most.

During the Lifesaving Society's April Pools Day, participants of all ages will have the opportunity to learn drowning prevention strategies, proper lifebuoy fitting and use, basic self-help skills, and rescue techniques in a water emergency. At 2 p.m. there will be a friendly relay race competition between members of town council, emergency responders, the Bradford Lions Club and Bradford West Gwillimbury lifeguards.

The sponsorship fee and monies raised throughout the swim will be donated to the Lifesaving Society's Drowning Prevention Fund. Staff at the Bradford West Gwillimbury Leisure Centre hope that you will join them in the quest to eliminate drowning.

MIRIAM KING/BRADFORD TIMES

Major, 5, enjoys the demonstration of Static Electricity by "Elephant Thoughts" at the InnPower Corporation Open House, in Innisfil on Saturday, April 11.

Innisfil powers up

MIRIAM KING
Postmedia Network

Innisfil Hydro has undergone a transformation.

The town-owned hydro distribution company is now InnPower Corporation and has moved into its new, state-of-the-art Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED)-certified offices, at the south end of the Innisfil Town Campus.

Saturday, InnPower celebrated its coming of age by hosting a public open house, inviting residents to tour the 42,000 sq. ft. facility. In the lobby, an LED Light Exchange let visitors exchange four incandescent bulbs for one of the new energy-efficient LED bulbs - and the science-entertainment company Elephant Thoughts introduced kids and adults to the wonders of electricity, through hands-on displays.

Outside the 10-bay garage, guests could fulfill their "bucket list" by taking a ride in a bucket truck.

"We get to show the public our new building," said Rob Real, operations manager - very different from the 6,000 sq. ft. that previously housed InnPower. It's the first time that all InnPower operations have been housed under one roof - an energy-efficient roof, at that.

Real remembered the old log model home on Commerce Drive, re-purposed as office space for Innisfil Hydro, that was one of the buildings housing the distribution company. Not only did the roof leak, the climate indoors mirrored the weather outside, he said.

Innisfil Hydro Distribution Systems Ltd. was established in 2000, with the Town of Innisfil as its shareholder and approximately 16,000 customers. It became InnPower Corporation on Jan. 26 of this year, as part of a plan to deal with substantial growth, over the coming decades, in both Innisfil and South Barrie.

"This building is built with the anticipation it's going to last for the next 30-40 years of Innisfil growth," said Tony Mendicino, leading a tour of the new facility, and pointing out the natural lighting that allows InnPower to save on its own electricity costs.

The building has high-efficiency natural gas heating, LED lighting, and there are plans to install solar panels on the sloped roof, in 2016.

The new building also includes a computerized operations centre, where employees track usage and identify power outages, using a SCADA software monitoring system. The company is also using new technology to communicate with its customers: a new "outage photo" on the InnPower website provides details of the area affected by any outages, the time the power went off, the estimated time of restoration, the number of customers affected - all accessible from any Smart Phone.

"We've come a long way," said Mendicino. "It's a big change."

The Open House was an opportunity for InnPower to demonstrate its commitment to the community. Not only were residents welcomed to tour the facility, InnPower hosted the annual Volunteer Appreciation Barbecue, in its 10-bay garage and warehouse.

Volunteers with groups that ranged from the Rotary Club of Innisfil, to Meals on Wheels, were thanked for their efforts, "in all of the different capacities you serve," said town CAO John Skrobobacz, at the kick-off to Volunteer Appreciation Week.
